

Triangle Reprographics Liability Release Form

Customer Furnished Artwork, Prints or Substrates

Triangle Reprographics will take every reasonable and necessary precaution when handling your work. However, due to many factors in the mounting, printing, and scanning process the possibility exists that artwork, prints or substrates may be damaged.

Original Artwork

Triangle Reprographics will take every precaution in handling your original artwork; however, will we not be held responsible for loss or damage that could occur. We do not recommend drymounting or laminating original artwork. Furthermore, should the artwork being left in Triangle's possession be of significant value we request that you have it insured. Framed art must be removed from the frame and glass, by the customer.

Customer Furnished Prints

The drymounting and laminating process uses extreme pressure and/or heat applied directly to the print. In rare cases, the print may become wrinkled or even destroyed. Triangle Reprographics will take every precaution in handling your print, however, will not be held responsible for loss or damage that could occur. Framed prints must be removed from the frame and glass, by the customer.

Customer Furnished Materials/Substrates

Triangle Reprographics' Durst Rho Flatbed Printer is capable of printing directly to a variety of rigid substrates up to 1½ inches thick. For specialty materials that are supplied by the customer, the customer assumes full responsibility for the material cost should it become damaged in the printing process. We recommend printing a small proof to assure that the inks will adhere. In some cases, additional material must be furnished to take care of misprints and calibration to the furnished substrate. Material must be clean and free of finger prints. Should the print fail for any reason, Triangle Reprographics cannot be held liable for the cost of the material.

Authorization

I have read and understand the risks outlined above and will not hold Triangle Reprographics responsible for any loss and/or damage of my artwork, prints or other material supplied to Triangle Reprographics. I hereby authorize Triangle Reprographics to proceed with my order under these conditions.
